became sleek and his tail acquired the proud arch of a dog of multifarious ancestry and a real home. Cresanolo called him Pete.

Last night Pete and Cresanolo went for a walk. At Ninety-ninth Street and Third Avenue Pete's revived spirits outstripped the sedate pace at which they were proceeding and impelled the dog to slip his leash and dash to the centre of the avenue, where he disappeared beneath a motor truck. Cresanolo gave chase, convinced that the regenerated Pete was about to be crushed to death.

As Cresanolo stooped to snatch the dog from beneath the vehicle a rear wheel hit him. A homeless dog with a dropping tail followed the men that carried Cresanolo's body to an undertaker's shop.
